National Easter Seal Chairman Named

Michael Landon, star and executive producer of NBC-TV's hit series, "Little House on the Prairie," has been named National Easter Seal Chairman and Telethon Host for 1977.

He will spearhead the annual drive for funds to support some 2,000 facilities and programs operated by the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults. In addition to visits to Easter Seal treatment centers and other personal appearances around the country, Landon will host the 20-hour National Easter Seal Telethon in Hollywood, March 26-27.

He first came to the attention of the television public as Little Joe on the "Bonanza" series which ran on NBC for 14 years. Now in his third season starring as Charles Ingalls, Landon began writing scripts about six years ago and now creates many of the "Little House on the Prairie" episodes.

Among his many television credits was the direction of the TV drama about the life of baseball's Roy Campanella - a long-time Easter Seal volunteer. Landon has made numerous appearances on other television shows and has served as guest host on the "Tonight Show."

Landon was born in Forest Hills, N.Y., and moved with his family to Collingswood, N.J. A track star throughout high school, he won a national championship in javelin competition in his senior year which led to an athletic scholarship to the Uniersity of Southern California.

Ironically, it was a torn ligament that shattered his hopes of continuing in athletics and proved to be the impetus for an acting career.

Forced to drop out of school, Landon took a job in a warehouse where a fellow worker, an aspiring actor, asked him to help prepare for an audition. Landon's interest was sparked and a short time later he was signed by Warner Bros. to attend its acting school.

A number of small roles in motion pictures followed, plus a few parts in "live" television. It was a role in "Restless Gun" that brought to the attention of the series producer, David Dortort, who was then casting the pilot for "Bonanza."

Although he's one of Hollywood's busiest men, Landon spends as much time as possible at his home in Beverly Hills with his wife, Lynn, and their seven children. A physical conditioning enthusiast, Landon exercises regularly, plays tennis, golf, handball and basketball.
